

KCMO ANIMAL CONTROL CRISIS

This report outlines a variety of concerns regarding the decision to privatize animal control without an interim plan. An interim period which doesn't seem to have clearly defined deadlines and has left the community to fend for themselves.

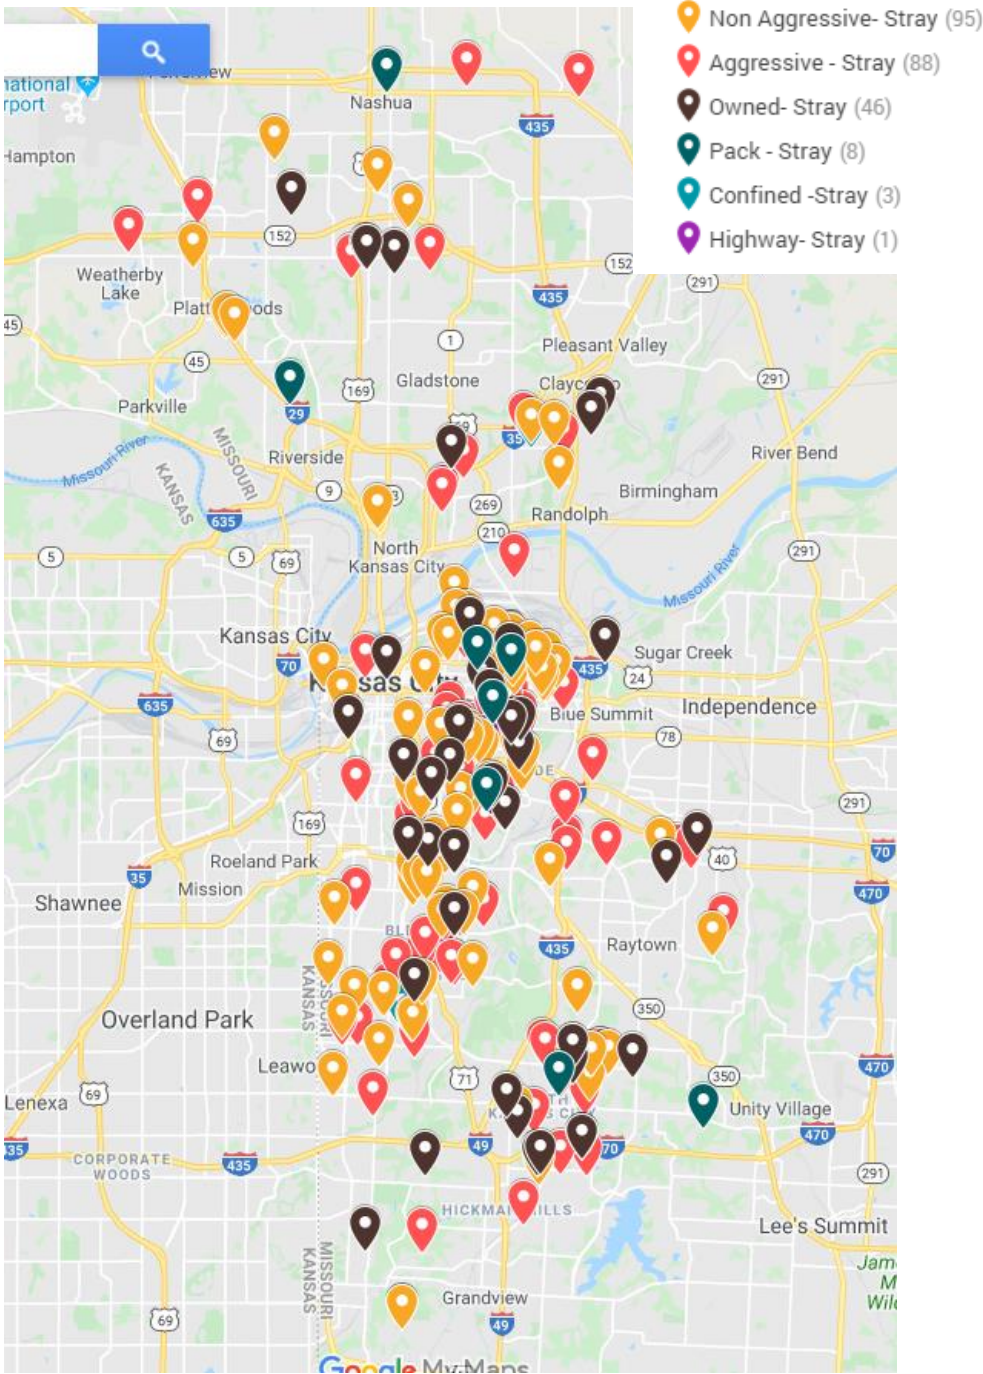

The consequences of this decision have resulted in a drastic reduction in animal control staffing and an inability to respond to the level of calls needed to protect our community, handle enforcement or the protection and sheltering of lost, abandoned and suffering pets.

Providing limited services during this interim period is dangerous and, ultimately, unacceptable. The majority of the threats to public safety, exposure to bites and danger to pets is mostly within underserved areas. Areas where people likely won't know what to do and will eventually give up calling altogether; meanwhile, animals will continue to suffer. This needs to be addressed immediately as this situation has continued to escalate rapidly.

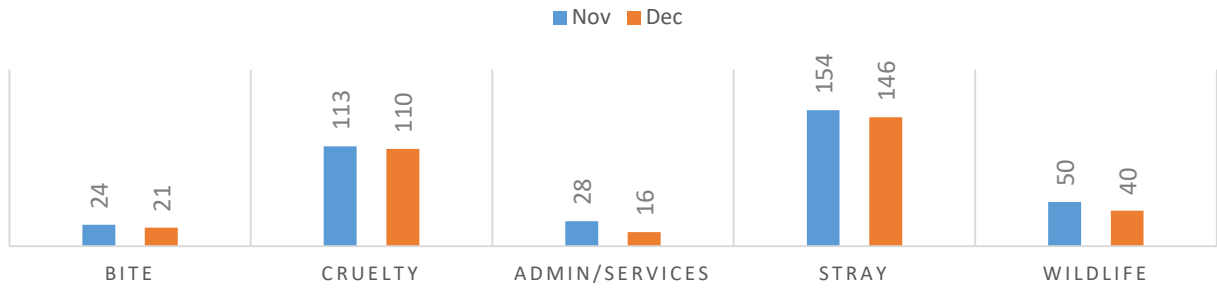

This is a serious situation that:

- Leaves our community vulnerable and is a public safety risk to pets and people.
- Results in needless suffering of pets exposed to elements; they are thereby defenseless and at risk of death.
- Is not meeting the needs of the taxpayers and level of service they deserve or is needed in areas of higher risk of animal incidents.
- Is undoing 17 years' worth of work by our organization and over $16 million dollars invested in this community to end pet homelessness, including a reduction of 311 stray calls by 30 percent and cruelty calls by almost 50 percent.
- And now due to public awareness of limited services, it has resulted in citizens not even reporting cases that includes injured pets, ultimately becoming a serious state of emergency for our community and the animals in it.
